TauBlog

Écrasez l'infâme!

„It’s Close in California: Clinton 49%, Sanders 47%“

André Tautenhahn · Wednesday, June 1st, 2016

Quelle: pixabay

Es wird noch einmal spannend im Kampf um die Nominierung der Demokraten. In Kalifornien kann Bernie Sanders vor allem die junge Generation überzeugen und mit einem Sieg im bevölkerungsreichsten Bundesstaat der USA die übliche Parteitagsarithmetik ins Wanken bringen.

Am kommenden Dienstag, 7. Juni, ist wieder Super Tuesday. In mehreren Bundesstaaten finden Vorwahlen statt.

> Hillary Clinton is clinging to a narrow two-point lead over Bernie Sanders in California ahead of the state’s June 7 primary, according to results from a brand-new NBC News/Wall Street Journal/Marist poll. Clinton gets support from 49 percent of likely Democratic primary voters in the state, while Sanders gets 47 percent, which is within the survey’s margin of error. […]
>
> Clinton and Sanders running even in California wouldn’t affect the overall delegate math in the Democratic race, where Clinton leads Sanders by some 270 pledged delegates and 770 overall delegates. (A tied race would essentially split the state’s 475 pledged delegates right down the middle under the Democrats‘ proportional allocation system.)

> But a Sanders victory in California – even by a small margin, and no matter how symbolic – could potentially give him justification to remain in the race heading into July's Democratic convention in July, despite trailing in the delegate math.

Quelle: NBC News

Mehr zu den US-Vorwahlen gibt es hier.

This entry was posted on Wednesday, June 1st, 2016 at 11:46 pm and is filed under Panorama
You can follow any responses to this entry through the Comments (RSS) feed. Both comments and pings are currently closed.